

Adobe Acrobat

DIGITAL DIRECT INC.

Database Management & Direct Mail

Adobe Acrobat(TM) software enables people using different software applications and different types of computers to easily share fully formatted electronic documents. The software is available for DOS, Windows, Macintosh, OS/2 and UNIX operating systems.

Existing files can quickly be converted into the Acrobat® Portable Document Format (PDF). Tables, graphics, typefaces and page layouts remain the same after translation, preserving the look and feel of the original document. Once in PDF format, documents can be read, annotated, printed and stored on any computer that has the free Adobe Acrobat® Reader software installed.

Acrobat® files can be easily shared over networks and the Internet. PDF automatically compresses files for more manageable storage and transmission. An Acrobat® based on-line information solution dramatically reduces the time spent on document conversion (to HTML, for example) and distribution. Users can quickly access documents electronically, then copy, print or store just the information they need.

With Adobe Acrobat®, a document's creator can add helpful electronic navigation features, such as bookmarks, page buttons and text links. Information can be presented in layers, so that readers can easily jump to relevant sections of a document using hypertext links attached to icons or particular words.

Adobe Acrobat® supports electronic information access features, such as full-text search and retrieval for building large documents or information repositories; document recognition for converting paper documents to electronic form; and support of SGML and other standards for communicating structured documents.

Acrobat is developed, maintained and supported by Adobe Systems Incorporated. Since its founding 11 years ago, the Adobe strategy has been to define and establish open standards that enable the communication of visually rich information in heterogeneous computing environments.

For more information see www.adobe.com

© Digital Direct Inc. All rights reserved.

PO Box 111
Marysville CA 95901-0111

e-mail: data@digitaldirectinc.com
Visit our web site at digitaldirectinc.com

Toll Free: (800) 824-4246
Direct: (530) 634-6030
Fax: (530) 477-3381